Martha Graham Dance Company

Review by Raymond Gallardo

The Martha Graham Dance Company's work is unique to Martha's style, because this was the way she danced. It is based on ordinary movement. In this type of ballet, Martha also used costumes to convey the feelings of her pieces.

Individual dancers were featured in each dance and each dance was different and unique in its own way. Each dance had its own story that was told by the dancer's movement. The dancers in the company practice their dance for months just to perfect the style. Martha's style is not easy to learn. It is very complicated and difficult to understand. Even though it's sometimes complex, you still want to watch it because it's a beautiful piece of work. You can always appreciate the meaning behind the work; while it may not mean much to you, it may mean the world to the dancer. It is important to just love it for the art of dancing.

The cost of tickets for this show runs from thirty to sixty dollars. This may seem a lot to someone who doesn't understand the art of dance or understand the art of Martha. The tickets cost this much because this kind of dance is unique in its own way; you will never find anything else like it! This show would be very interesting to someone familiar with Martha's ballet and understands the art and the passion that is put forth behind all of it. However, it is also enjoyable for people who are not familiar with Martha's style. Either way, your money will be well spent.
